I know ppl get annoyed when I say this, but human behavior continues proving that monogamy as a universal default is a failure. We just seem to be extremely stubborn about and often in denial about it.

Note: This doesn't mean monogamy can't and doesn't work in practice for a lot of people, because obviously it does. But it fails about as often as it works, and that's worth acknowledging.

Like even when it does work, people admit and even sometimes hold in virtue and exalt how difficult it is to maintain as a winning feature.
