LOCKED LIQUIDTY FOR 10 YEARS = STILL A RUGPULL?? 😞😞

That's right, even if liquidity is VERIFIED to be locked, scammers can still find ways to steal your money...

I will use an example that went down 12 hours ago - a coin called MaxAPY rugpulled their coin 1/

About 7 days ago, the main advertisement for new investors into MaxAPY was big crypto Shillers (like @bainesy4886) posting links to their Telegram for money.

PS. Not sure how much he knew, or was paid. 2/

Yesterday, Mr @RobotDefi shared with us that the coin became a Honeypot (an unsellable coin) after people had already bought it and the project rugged the liquidity.

But how can this happen when he verified that LIQUIDITY WAS LOCKED?? - let's see what they did... 3/

First of all, I used @Token_Sniffer to find the contract.

This is the main LP contract:

0xcb6cd204d783dc8d66896a6def5867d332228d7b

Originally, this locked over 90% of the tokens...

4/

I went and verified this on Pinksale @pinkecosystem and found that this is infact locked until APRIL 2032 - 10 YEARS FROM NOW!

You can see this yourself in the image below, along with the LP contract owner's address.

Let's follow the owner's movements... 5/

Lock info

Unlock Date	2032.04.08 21:00 UTC (in 10 years)

Remember his address is 0x8061d7e6fd3bc85267f92b2f2357c22c70e23404

Remember, now their addresses are whitelisted and these changes don't apply to them. 10/

Now this wallet (ending in 5d7c) has ran away with 10 BNB, over $4,000 from the LP - thanks to the owner modifying the contract.

All the meanwhile, that original LP wallet is STILL "LOCKED."

And this is how they did it - sorry to everyone that got scammed :(

This one took a while to put together but I had alot of fun delving deeper into this case.

Thanks @RobotDefi and @rugmies for the original info on this one too.

Please share this because there is a misconception that Locked Liquidity = No Rug Pull - NOT TRUE!

Much love
